

Devin, GED® graduate

You're more likely than ever to earn your diploma

Did you know?

The passing score for the GED® test is now 145 instead of 150.
That means there's never been a better time to test.

What you need to know:

- This score change is effective immediately, even though it won't be reflected in your MyGED® score report until March 1, 2016. Just know that if you score 145 or higher, you passed!*
- If you took a GED® test in the past and scored 145 or higher, then you passed that test! Log into GED.com and check out the "My Scores" page to see your updated record on March 1, 2016.*
- If you have now passed all four test subjects because of this score change, congratulations! Check your email (and spam folder) for a message from MyGED® with more information about your status change.*
- The GED Ready® practice test score levels have also changed! Log into GED.com and check out the "My Scores" page to see if you're now "Likely to Pass" any of the test subjects.

* A few states are still in the process of evaluating and implementing these recommendations. Visit www.GEDTestingService.com/tester-score-change-faqs for more information.

Take the next step towards your future.
Log into GED.com and schedule your GED® test today.